Agriculture.

SUGGESTIONS CONCERNING THE BUSINESS.

THERE is a large profit in growing little things and in products than in the larger staples, but it requires a different system of management.

ONE has said that storage rooms out of doors for farm tools are cheap in the first instance, but most costly in the final reckoning.

THERE is often a considerable loss of value in barnyard manure, caused by leaching. The best place for manure to leach is on the ground where the crops are to grow.

ALL lines of business have their ups and downs, and it is only those who stick to what they have undertaken, and follow it intelligently, who are successful.

If you are not getting the top prices for stock round around for the cause, there is no good reason why one man should not raise good stock as another.

AFTER the frequent rains and the warm sunshine look for weeds to grow rapidly. Every day lost in not destroying them means more labor to be applied when the weeds are commenced. Crab grass can be destroyed very easily just as it appears, but it takes full possession of the soil if given an opportunity to grow.

QUITTING field work enough earlier so as to get the milking done by the usual time for quitting work on the farm is the best and about the only way, says a writer, to keep good help on a dairy farm. Hired help cannot be blamed for not working to put in the full day's work in the field, and then put in an hour or more after dark milking and doing chores.

If you have fat hens out down their food. Keep them on oats, and do not feed corn or wheat. The best remedy for this trouble is exercise. The more active the fowl is the less likelihood there is of its becoming too fat. For this reason the Mediterranean class, and other fowls of the Mediterranean class, are usually exempt from this trouble.

It will be unfortunate if the low price of wool shall cause farmers generally to give up keeping sheep. There is no farm animal which can be so easily and quickly dressed when fresh meat is wanted. A whole sheep will furnish valuable variety in food for three or four families which it keeps fresh, and if there are several in the neighborhood who keep sheep, the interchange of fresh meat when one or the other kills a sheep gives the farmer the advantage of a city butcher shop and his supplies of fresh meat much cheaper than the butcher can afford to supply it to him.

BEANS as a staple crop will find favor with farmers this season who are reducing acreage in wheat. Prices are not liable to fall much for several years. In Michigan where great attention is given the crop, they sell for as low as $1 per bushel.

HOLSTEIN fast to old implements and ignoring the newest is to enter into competition with others in a handicapped condition. Any labor-saving appliance lessens the cost of production and affords a larger profit. The enterprising farmer will keep himself well informed on this point and always be on the lookout for labor-saving implements in every department.

THERE is no knowing the cost of a crop except by keeping an account with it. Farming is a business, and the farmer must do as other business men do. Unless he does so, he will be unable to estimate concerning his profits, or know whether he has made a profit. Every article consumed on the farm should also be charged as so much sold to him.

G. W. DEMAREE, writing in the American Bee Keeper concerning the outlook in bee culture, says: "The business is settling down in more permanent form, agricultural goods and supplies are becoming more uniform and staple in character, and less affected by doubtful and worthless inventors. The business of beekeeping is taking the place of the business in the highest rank in the bee business, in place of honey-producing hives and fixtures. This is the most hopeful feature of our times pertaining to the future bee business."

DR. ALLEN, assistant director of the office of experiment stations, discussing in a recent bulletin the value of leguminous plants for green manuring, says: "Growth more luxuriant than other green manures, and for stock and for the cheapest manure for the soil. They do this because they obtain from the air a substance necessary for plants and animals alike, which costs in the form of fertilizers and feeding stuffs from 15 to 25 cents a pound."

For those who wish to keep land in clover only a single year the alkali variety is probably best. It bears its seed in the first crop of the second year in growth. When that is cut the plants die. But alkali hay is sweeter than hay from the first crop of common red clover. It does not have long tap roots reaching into the subsoil as red clover does, but instead a network of roots that run through the soil and reach the surface. It is probably the greater amount of warmth that alkali clover roots get early in the season that makes it hay better than that of red clover. When the soil warms deeper later in the season the red clover hay becomes more nutritious.

Hogs will eat the spoiled corn, wheat, oats or potatoes. Nothing else will. Herein is the hog the best of farm animals. When feeding inferior grain or vegetables be sure to feed plenty and some sound feed at the same time.

Most farmers have learned the value of persistent labor; many more have yet to grasp the importance of systematic work. These latter often wonder why the city man, who takes to farming frequently makes a financial success, backed by no practical experience. Usually it is because his school, college or business training has taught him discipline of mind.

AN Ohio farmer says: "Last September I had 12 fine shoats which had been on clover all summer and were in fine condition, weighing 1500 pounds when put in the pen. I fed these hogs 50 bushels of wheat, soaked 12 hours before feeding. I sold these hogs at $5.00 per hundred and they weighed 3,000 pounds. A gain of 1,200 pounds at $5.00 per hundred would give me $67.20 for 50 bushels of wheat, which I would have sold at 52 cents per bushel, $26. Now can any farmer say it doesn't pay to feed wheat?"

Good butter can be spoiled with poor salt, as well as by poor handling. There are plenty of good grades of dairy salt, and it is a great mistake to use a poor salt because it is cheap. Many creamery men have found this out to their sorrow.
